Visual Thesis Overview

Introduction

This visual thesis explores the use of group participatory mediums through the combination of both design and gamification principles, to develop a model to affect social change.

As seen in such participatory mediums as cooperative games, serious games, and interactive edutainment, I will design a user interaction integrating both analog and digital mediums – which offers learning opportunities through a combination of European user interface (UI) and American user experience (UX) design principles – that can advance acceptance, connectedness, and understanding of LGBTQIA people.

Communication Strategy

Communication Goals

The perception of the varying states of attraction, gender identification, and sex as three different and distinct attributes that every human being has in whatever combination is difficult to do but is much more appropriate than an initialism.

Therefore the communication goal of this project is to communicate attraction, gender identification, and sex as three separate attributes that each individual can have, and that in some instances this can change over a person's lifetime.

Intended Outcomes

The intended outcome of achieving the communication goal is for the player(s) to become aware of the varying states of attraction, gender identification, and sex through design and gamification.

The research for the visual component of this thesis will focus the development of a niche tabletop game that introduces LGBTQIA concepts in a non-innocuous or subtle way, the game will be played by using heuristic design with European UI elements, and phenomenological design choices through American UX.

Also, a website exhibiting the visual thesis game and research will also be constructed to fulfill the requirements for the Degree of Master of Fine Arts in Graphic Design at the Savannah College of Art and Design.

Target Audience & Geographic Scope

The primary target audience for the visual thesis are male and female, cisgender, heterosexual, United States of America citizens and foreign nationals of varying socio-economic class, that are ages six and up.

Research Methodology

Mood Experience

Preliminary Visual Research

By conducting some preliminary visual research for similar designs to my visual thesis I found that there were no shortage of gay-themed boardgames, but not LGBTQIA inclusive games. Save for That's So Gay I found no games with a similar objective.

The following are the most popular list of contemporary games I found that closely relate to the LGBTQIA genre:

- That's So Gay
- Gayme
- Drag Ball
- Gayopoly
- Gay Monopoly
- Homopolis
- Gay Trivia
- The Rainbow Gayme
- Gay Weekend
- It's Only Natural

Ideation

Qualitative Research

The following are some examples of tabletop games that are similar in genre, material, and cooperative gameplay. These games are exemplary in regards to combining European UI functionality with American UX, and I intend to analyze the mechanics of these games for ideation and implementation:

- Munchkin
- Forbidden Island
- Mouse Trap
- Life
- Red November
- Escape: The Curse of the Temple
- Jupiter Rescue

Munchkin

Munchkin is an award-winning card game, designed by Steve Jackson, captures the essence of the dungeon experience... with none of that stupid roleplaying stuff. The aspects of this game that are applicable to my visual thesis are the information being relayed through cards, the cooperative and competitive nature that simultaneously co exists, the ease of play and winning, and the modifications to one's character through random encounters and choices.

Forbidden Island

In Forbidden Island instead of winning by competing with other players like most games, everyone must work together to win the game. Relevant to my visual thesis is the cooperative mechanics that game employs such as a combined sense to win, a danger component, and a time component that forces people to collaborate as opposed to competing. Also relevant is the miniatures, figures, and tokens that embody great heuristic design.

The Game of Life

The Game of Life is a classic game of chance, and is easy to set up and play. Most relevant to visual thesis are the randomness that one encounters through serendipity, fortuitous, or devastatingly bad luck situations that are thrown at a character throughout one's life. Also, the buildings, game board, cards, and interactive dial facilitate a unique American UX for the players.

Red November

Red November is a cooperative game in a submarine where everything is going wrong. The sub is descending and the water pressure increasing, the nuclear reactor is overheating, fires and water leaks are everywhere, and there's a giant Kraken looming nearby. What is relevant to my visual thesis is the storyline which facilitates the players to organize, solve the problems, divide the tasks among themselves to minimize the risks, and sometimes sacrifice themselves for the common cause.

Mouse Trap

In Mouse Trap players at first cooperate to build a working Rube Goldberg-like mouse trap, but once the mouse trap has been built, players turn against each other attempting to trap opponents' mouse-shaped game pieces. Most relevant to the visual thesis are the 3D maker objects, the interactive elements, and the combined building that occurs between the players.

Escape: The Curse of the Temple

Escape: The Curse of the Temple is a cooperative game in which players must escape (yes...) from a temple (yes...) which is cursed (yes...) before the temple collapses and kills one or more explorers, thereby causing everyone to lose. Relevant to the visual thesis is the board-building aspect as the players go, as well as the randomness of rolling dice simultaneously with other players to cooperate.

Jupiter Rescue

Jupiter Rescue is a co-operative strategy game in which players work together to escort 28 colonists to an escape pod before they're converted into aliens. Most relevant to the visual thesis is that each turn, players may move themselves, move nearby colonists, or kill aliens, enabling the players to work together for the greater good, or towards a positive task result.

Mind Map & Notes

- A. ~~Time Element~~
 - A. Working Simultaneous
 - B. Forces Teamplay and Roles
 - ~~Don't work together~~
- B. Passive Roles f/ Lager
 - Co-Operative Games
 - Co-Operative Games like RPLs
- C. Leadership
 - ex. Dependence of the realm
- What's my roll?
- * Shadows / Camelot Rule
 - Can't Tell specific cards gets people into game play
 - Buy into Thematic Experience

f/ Designer

- An Event Deck - like dungeons where they get worse if you don't work together
- "Changing Threat Landscape"
- Ramping Up w/ Tension by having threat come up in a couple different ways.

- I. Accountability
 - Forces players to do something
- II. Small Co-Op Groups
 - More people, less voice
 - can't think

D. Character's Different rolls make support work.

E. They have to talk w/ each other and they have to work together

F. Everyone can't get all the treasure

G. Everyone has to help ^{to some degree} but the game still continues to some type of conclusion.

Heroic Gay Characters:

* Gay Greek/Roman/Spartan Warrior

- James Bond/John English
- Cowboy

* Elf Prince/Fairy Prince

- Superhero in tights
- Drag Queen

* Amazon Woman/Strong Woman

- Haram Girl/Indian Princess

Game Mechanics

Wednesday, July 8, 2015 10:51 PM

- Win Mechanic - Players cooperate to survive 10 moons, 10 years, 10 passes of life? Possibly include 10 requirements for each moon or cycle that a person needs to fill? I thought would be a partner I track in a totem attractor a child.
- Totem Mechanic - Include the mechanic from Forbidden Island to where you have to get for matching cards to get a totem?
- All the curse cards are actually Hazzard part that affect everyone like Blizzard, flood, Stampede, volcano, etcetera.
- Everyone everyone has to combine efforts to defeat monsters?

Asexual is not included above by very definition

Questioning is not included because it's transitional.

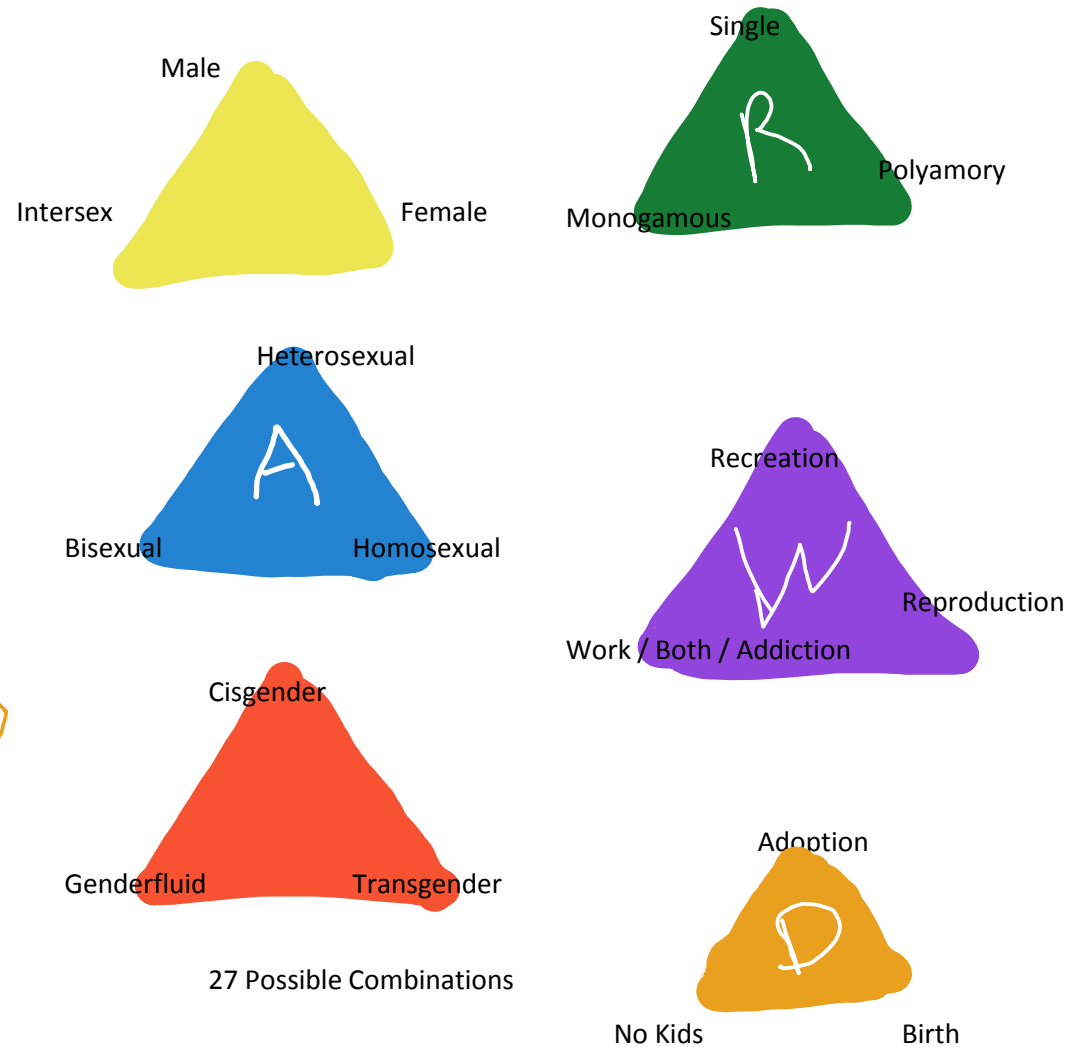

Pansexual is not included because it spans two categories.

2. Identify with a Gender
3. Develop an Attraction
4. Form a Relationship(s)

6. Survive 5 Others Cards?
7. Survive X Years?

Prototype Exploration

I'm exploring various tabletop game configurations that utilizes figurines, dice, cards, and possibly a board. These can be eliminated or incorporated going forward since the next phase will just be pursuing an option and refining a design. Testing the first paper prototype of this game will require the following to develop gameplay mechanics, timing, rules, and playability:

Starting Gameplay

Potential Deliverables

- A Tabletop Game
- An Exhibition Website
- An Application/Web Application

Tabletop Game

I should be able to prove my thesis by starting with the paper gameplay mechanics as Munchkin and The Game of Life – cards for the majority of development, randomness, and conflict – and combining the cooperative gaming aspects of Forbidden Island and Red November (dice, tokens, and 3D maker objects) with a dedicated application/web application (tracking statistics, scanning Quick Response [QR] codes, augmented reality [AR]).

The Website

The website will be an exhibition of my visual and written Master of Fine Arts in Graphic Design thesis for the Savannah College of Art and Design. The website – a responsive, HTML5, CSS3, and search engine-optimized experience – will be an advertisement for the game, which will be available free to download and print/3D-print by anyone wanting to use the game to advance acceptance, connectedness, and understanding of LGBTQIA people.

Web Application

The game will either make use of QR codes – a type of two-dimensional barcode – to connect the analog game objects to digital data and hyperlink media, a custom application that makes use of AR for digital sculptural elements to analog game objects, or will allow 3D maker pieces to be downloaded for printing from the website.

Rough Compositions

Game

In Propagayda 2 to 6 players work together to survive, support each other, and help one another to win. Each player is on their own individual path of self-discovery by growing, cultivating relationships, surviving horrendous monsters, and enduring the unknown. If one player makes in to level 10 everybody wins; however, it is entirely possible that everybody will fail.

Propagayda Logo

My research in sans serif tabletop typography has lead me to use the Crom typeface as a point of departure, and customize the logo in regards to letters 'a', customizing them as triangles to reference the character sheet mechanic.

Types of Cards

I will need to design templates for the following types of cards:

Red Unknown Cards (back)

- Monster Cards (37)
- Curse/Disaster Cards (19)
- Class/Attraction Cards (12)

Blue Explore Card (back)

- Equipment/Companion & Children Cards (39)
- Combat Item Cards (16)

Yellow Time Card (back)

- Level Up Cards (10)
- Race/Tribal Class Cards (9)
- Any Time Cards (8)
- Dualities (4)
- During Combat/Gender Cards (14)

3D Objects

A player gains a their corresponding totem if they gain a Tribal Class, survive a Monster, and survive a Curse. There are only six standard totems, and totems can't be shared. The corresponding totems are:

The Purple Pixie - Totem of Bisexual Attraction

The Blue Bear - Totem of Male Homosexual Attraction

The Orange Ogress - Totem of Female Homosexual Attraction

The Green Golem - Totem of No Attraction

The Yellow Yulon - Totem of Intersex Sex

The Red Wrasse - Totem of Transgender Gender Identity

Gameplay & Rules

Everyone starts the game using the sex dice, and automatically gains one point for rolling their sex. Players work together to get an individual player 10 points.

- Sex (start with 1 point)
- Identify with a Gender (1 point)
- Develop an Attraction (1 point)
- Form a Relationship(s) (1 point per/relationship)
- Become a Tribal Class (1 point)
- Survive A Curse (1 point per/Curse)
- Survive A Monster (1 point per/Monster)
- Acquiring A Tribal Totem (1 point per/Totem)

Each round a player will three main actions they can perform: wait, hunt/gather, or venture into the unknown.

If a player chooses to wait by drawing a time card, this is the only action they can take, thus ending their turn. Hunting and gather allows a player to move about their current area, draw a location card, and interact with other players. Venturing into the unknown will definitely involve a disaster or a monster, but will yield rewards in the form of points.

Each time a player fails a disaster or fight against a monster, every player loses 1 point. If any player's point go below 1 to 0, or if only 1 player is left, the game is over.

Application/WebApp

The application or WebApp will allow a user to keep track of all the players in the game, and their statistics like class, sex, gender identity, attraction, point, etc. The WebApp will be responsive across all devices, and will make use of touch-based CSS with JavaScript for behavioral interaction.

Paper Prototype

Using the card game Munchkin as a point of departure, I crafted a similar niche tabletop game that, unlike Munchkin, eliminates competition in lieu of collaboration. So instead of players seeking money, power, and advancement to win before the other players, the game includes:

- Gender Cards
- Attraction Cards
- Modifiers Cards
- Companion cards
- Combat Item Cards
- Level-Up Cards

All of these cards enable the players to work collaboratively for survival against:

- Disaster Cards
- Monster Cards

All of which I divided into Hunt, Gather, and Camp Decks. I will eventually need to create illustrations for all of these cards, and I'm thinking white line art will be best, but that enhancement will come after testing the game.

Paper Prototype (Cont'd.)

Already at this point I'm recognizing parallels between gamification and design that can feed into my final thesis. Examples of these are in regards to process:

- Iterative Design Process and Prototyping a Game
- Usability Testing
- Communication Goals / Gameplay Goals

Also, I'm devoting my next work to play test to develop a solid co-operation mechanic, such as:

- Time
- Failure
- Loosing

...and I still need to focus on game piece design, gameplay design, and app/player trackers as the relate to design principles.

Play/Usability Testing

So I have completed my first round of usability testing... it's good and bad. There were four players who suggested some game mechanics that I didn't think of at all, and design elements that were completely missing. Overall I got some very valuable suggestions from the players.

Propagayda Rules: First Draft

Propagayda

In Propagayda players work together as members of a tribe to help one another advance and survive. Each player is on their own individual path of self-discovery by growing, surviving monster attacks, and enduring disasters, but the tribe must also advance for anybody to win; likewise, it is entirely possible that everybody will fail and the tribe will become extinct.

Setup

Two to six can play. Divide the cards into three different types of decks — Hunt, Gather, and Camp decks — then shuffle each deck. Deal two cards from each deck to each player.

Each player rolls the sex die to determine what the starting sex will be for their tribe member; this can't change unless otherwise noted by a card.

Starting Gameplay

The oldest player in real life goes first. When the first player finishes their turn, the player to their left takes a turn, and so on.

Turn Phases

Your turn begins as soon as the previous player's turn ends. Once all Players complete their turns, a phase of the moon has gone by.

1. Decide if you are going to Hunt, Gather, and Camp by drawing one card face up from the corresponding deck.

- If it's a Monster, you must fight it! (See Combat)
 - If the card is a Disaster it applies to you immediately. (See Disaster)
 - If you draw another card you put it into your hand.
2. After Step #1 is resolved, you can trade one item for another item to one player.

Advancement

Everyone starts the game using the sex dice, and automatically gains one point for rolling their sex. Players work together to get an individual player 10 points.

- Sex (start with 1 point)
- Identify with a Gender (1 point)
- Develop an Attraction (1 point)
- Form a Relationship(s) (1 point per/relationship)
- Become a Tribal Class (1 point)
- Survive A Disaster (1 point per/Curse)
- Survive A Monster (1 point per/Monster)
- Acquiring A Tribal Totem (1 point per/Totem)

Card Management

At the end of each player's turn you can only have five cards in your hand, unless otherwise noted by a card. If you have more than five cards, discard down to five and give them to the lowest level person in your tribe.

Feedback/Testing Results

Committee Feedback

From September 29, 2015 Meeting

Last night I had a fantastic meeting with Professor Betgevergiz and Professor Conrad concerning the status of my written and visual thesis. They will both be reviewing the written and visual components and get comments, edits, and suggestions back to me as soon as possible. I also inquired about my MFA presentation, timing, and what was achievable by November to graduate. The core suggestions were as follows:

- The Propagayda website will function as the MFA's presentation, and will contain the design brief, downloadable/printable game, and video.
- I can eliminate the webapp deliverable from the visual thesis; they felt that this was superfluous, as wasn't integral to my core thesis.
- Include the play-testing/usability assessment results in the final website and written thesis.
- Include is the assessment of attraction, sex, gender, and relationships being considered by the players, and if their thoughts have changed concerning the subjects. Utilize a pre and post assessment for players.
- For 'design in context' purposes, include a video showing people actually interacting with each other, and playing with the game.
- I need to provide alternatives to play the game if someone can't 3D print the objects (aka, dice for sex die, objects for figurines, etc.)
- From a visual design perspective, using blue text on black ink for the cards wasn't advisable; I will be changing the reading part of the cards to white.

Those were the primary comments, so I'm going to email these comments/notes to all of my committee members so we are on the same page, and share Professor Meyer's comments so far with the rest of my committee. Focusing on the game's development, its usability/play-testing, and presenting that through a website with an accompanied video is what is primarily left for my visual thesis. For the written thesis, I will be now including the play-testing results, feedback, revisions, and my conclusions based on survey results.

Remaining Thesis Components

- Get the website ready for alpha phase
- Final testing of game
- Assessment of game
- Final print of game
- Make a video of the game
- Visualize data for assessment
- Final written thesis
- Include final written thesis, video, data visualization, and photos of final print of game in website
- Do final testing of the website
- Get committee approval
- Submit thesis

Gameplay Improvements

Mechanical/Design Improvements

- We need sex cards to keep track of sex
- A tabletop-way to track levels/grain
- Get rid of some items for totem cards; four totem cards allow you to establish a tribal totem.
- 10-sided Dice used for beta/get a 6-sided dice for next test.
- White Cards with color strips on face-side.
- Word Monster cards that it takes a combined strength of, or food , or run away of tribe
- Need drawings... test drawing types

Content Improvements

- Add text to: You must play this card as soon as you get it, unless you already have an Attraction/Gender card in play.
- Add text to transgender/cisgender: Play only if you are male or female
- Add text to Homosexual/Heterosexual Card stating that: Play only if you are male or female
- Add to Intersex card: The Player chooses, or can Re-roll sex dice to determine if you get an attraction or gender expression that is based on your sex.
- Add text to companion card: If you don't have an attraction, put this into play until you develop one. Then discard or keep accordingly.
- Monsters, take out fight with level only.

Suggested Improvements Overall

- Go up a level cards, and monster cards seem arbitrary... possibly make challenges like game of life, and a currency which the players have to have to survive, like food. Like you have to never be under the amount of grains f/each player every time it goes around. Which is a moon cycle.
- Maybe age could factor into it somehow?
- If you keep monsters, let them turn into items for use... ergo, crab/into crab shoes?
- Each player class receives food/grain every cycle which is different per class.
- Add back Food value, and f/grain – monster they can choose grain or gathers
- Disasters should hurt food supply, etc.... monsters are a missed opportunity for food
- Keep Serendipity Cards as is!
- Level Up cards should be increase food, etc., or something o help clan, whcih should be more about survival
- Lowest combat strength is that of # of players... 2 should be the lowest monster.
- Totems grant the tribe powers

Rules Improvements

- Define Combat Rules to include entire tribe defenses.
- Define Runaway Rules to include entire tribe.
- Define Disaster Rules to include entire tribe.

Propagayda Rules: Second Draft

Propagayda

In Propagayda players work together as members of a tribe to help one another advance and survive. Each player is on their own individual path of self-discovery by growing, surviving monster attacks, and enduring disasters, but the tribe must also advance for anybody to win; likewise, it is entirely possible that everybody will fail and the tribe will become extinct.

Pieces

List all of the pieces of the game, and alternated pieces if not doing 3D printing..

Setup

Two to six can play. Divide the cards into the four different types of decks – Player, Hunt, Gather, and Fortify decks – then shuffle each deck. Place the game board in the center of the table, align the Spirit Totems and Player, Hunt, Gather, and Fortify decks on the outside of the game board as shown.

Insert Pictures of decks here

Starting Gameplay

The oldest player in real life always goes first. Do the following:

1. Roll the Birth Die to determine what the starting sex will be for your tribe member; this can't change unless otherwise noted by a card.
Insert Pictures of Birth Die
2. Choose a tribal member Player Piece.
Insert Pictures of player pieces here
3. Find the corresponding Player Card in the Player deck for your color/sex, and place it in front of you. Insert Pictures of card here.
4. Place your Player Piece into the Start Circle on the game board. Insert Picture.

When the first player finishes their turn, the player to their left takes a turn, and so on rolling the Birth Die, choosing a Player Piece, and finding their corresponding Player Card. After each player has done this, deal two cards from the Hunt, Gather, and Fortify decks to each player.

Turn Phases

Each player's turn begins as soon as the previous player's turn ends. First a player has to decide if the tribe is going to hunt, gather, or fortify by drawing one card face up from the corresponding deck.

- If the player decides that the tribe will gather, each player takes a 1 Food Token each
- If the player decides that the tribe will hunt, and it's a Monster Card (See Combat)
- If the card is a Disaster it applies to all members of the tribe immediately. (See Disaster)
- Any other card, reveal to the other tribe members, and place it into your hand.

Then, each turn a player has two free actions that they may take. A player may either:

- place a card into play
- trade one Item Card to another tribe member for another Item Card
- acquire a Spirit Totem
- discard an Item Card and receive it's equivalent in Food
- or perform any combination of the previous three actions (i.e. place two cards into play, trade two Item Cards, trade an Item Card and acquire a Spirit Totem, etc.)

At the end of each player's turn you can only have five cards in your hand, unless otherwise noted by a card in play. If you have more than five cards, discard down to five and give them to the lowest level person in your tribe.

Tribe Advancement

Each player must work together to help every tribal member advance and survive. To achieve stability with and a quality of life for your tribe, each member of the tribe has to be born, identify with a gender, develop an attraction, form at least one relationship, achieve a place in the tribe, and acquire a Spirit Totem of their very own. This is done by players collaboratively building and supportively sharing cards, and overcoming disasters and monsters together.

To win the game of Propagayda, each tribe member must achieve the six conditions: being born, identifying with a gender, developing an attraction, forming at least one relationship, achieving a place in the tribe, and finding a Spirit Totem of their very own.

Most of these will be in the form of cards and will have to be drawn by the individual players; however, Spirit Totem, Companion, and Item cards can be traded from one player to another in exchange for other cards.

Each time a player places one of the following cards in play:

- Sex Card (given at Birth)
- Gender Card
- Attraction Card
- Companion Card
- Class Card

... or they acquire a Spirit Totem by discarding three Totem Cards at once, in exchange for a Spirit Totem figurine, they advance their Player Piece on the game board into the next circle of their tribe's development.

Winning the Game

Once each tribe member is in the last circle of their tribe's development, and has a Sex, Gender, Attraction, Companion, and Class Card in play with a Spirit Totem in play, the game is over and the tribe has won!

Combat

Often when a player makes a decision for the tribe to hunt, they will encounter a Monster. When this occurs, the player that drew the card makes the decision (usually by consulting the rest of the tribe) to either fight the Monster or placate the Monster by doing the following:

Fighting

If the tribe is going to fight a Monster, each player:

- counts their level from the game board
- adds to that all bonuses from Companion Cards in play
- and adds to that all bonuses from Item Cards in play

Then add each player's total is added together with the other's player's total, and this determines the tribe's combined strength. If the tribe's combined strength is greater than the Monster's strength – or if it the tribe's combined strength is tied with the Monster's strength, and you have a Warrior in your tribe – the Monster is defeated. The tribe then gains the amount of food indicated on the Monster Card.

Placating

If the tribe is going to placate a Monster instead of fighting, the tribe must sacrifice the amount of food indicated on the Monster Card. The Monster then is discarded, and no harm or reward comes to the tribe.

Death

If the tribe can't fight or placate the Monster, then the player that drew the card dies. When a player experiences Death the Monster is put into the discard pile, their turn is immediately over, the player removes their Player Piece from the board, and they discard all of their cards to the appropriate discard piles.

On the player's next turn, they are born again and must start over by rolling the Birth Die, choosing a Player Piece, finding their corresponding Player Card, and placing their Player Piece into the Start Circle on the game board.

Losing the Game

If at any time there are no Player Tokens on the board, the game is over and the tribe is lost.

Companion Cards

If players don't have an attraction, players may put Companion Cards into play until they develop one, then discard or keep the companion accordingly.

Disaster Cards

Disaster cards affect the entire tribe, and are put into play immediately when they are drawn or traded, except for the first round of gameplay. Some Disaster Cards have one affect and then go away, while others stay in play until resolved by the tribe.

Website Improvements

Redesign

Based on conversations with my thesis committee, I decided to scrap the website that I had built. Here is the old website I started to construct:

The website will be the culminating presentation of my MFA thesis - it will contain the final written thesis, the downloadable rules, the printable cards, the 3D printable pieces, the assessment techniques I employed, video of people playing the game, and data visualization of those assessment from real people - so it had to be structured very differently. Furthermore, the design research that I conducted for the website was focused around various tabletop game websites, and so that ultimately was very limiting.

Then I live prototyped the website with dummy content at www.propagayda.com. The following list of items still remain for me to do at this point:

- Include final Design Brief
- Refine SASS
- Finish mobile navigation
- Apply 1366px max-width
- Create feature images of gameplay for 1366px by 768px height (laptop)
- Make game pieces interactive on website
- Retake first-person photograph with the final iteration
- Write final text
- Create visualization of gameplay experience
- Create assessment form
- Visualize total data
- Visualize individual player data
- Retake download photos
- Add final written thesis parts
- Add lightbox for written thesis images with position as opposed to display none (for searching and accessibility)
- Mobile testing
- Performance testing
- Accessibility testing
- Add a downloadable PDF format of the thesis
- Add a scroll down error to indicate there is more on the page

Designing a Game Board

Based on feedback from the first round of play-testing with users, I would need to develop a game board that accomplishes the flowing tasks:

- keeps track of player's current levels
- visualizes the winning object for the tribe
- identifies the six goals that each player needs to achieve to win the game
- has visual storage indicators for cards and tokens

Play/Usability Testing 2

Using low quality prints on gloss paper for cards and the game board, and the 3D printed game pieces, I conducted a second round of play/usability testing with three players.

Feedback/Testing Results

I have completed my second round of play/usability testing. I posed questions to the three player group and recorded certain responses with an audio recording device. From that I quickly jotted down notes and observations from the players on how to improve the game. One of the most interesting quotes from a player was:

"It's neat that it's sort of like creating a character in Dungeons & Dragons. We have this polyamorous, intersex, gender fluid, bisexual with a male companion... it doesn't affect my ability to play the game, which is that I'm a hunter carrying around a pole arm, wearing armor, and beating the crap out of giraffes... trying to get my totem. And yet you have to get these things to move up each level, but there's just enough not focus on them, that it doesn't become the most important thing, but you still learn it."

Observations/Suggested Changes

- Eliminate the Serendipity Cards all together
- Lighten the gray arrows on the game board
- Lighten 'Finish' on the game board
- Change wording in rules from 'extinct' to 'lost'
- Unify the symbols on the six goals to the game board and the cards
- Eliminate Gender Card powers
- Add 'Draw A card' to the list of things one can do each turn
- Examine/Review Item Cards to eliminate Run Away text
- Clarify in rules what the differences are between the Hunt/Gather/Fortify decks
- Eliminate Item Card from turn text, and replace with 'any card'
- Write Levels on game board
- Add to rules that Death discards all cards in play and in hand
- Change verbiage from Discard to Cash-In on play turns on Sex Card and in the Rules
- State in the rules that you start over on your turn, and that you draw 2 cards from each deck again
- Add player can trade cards during their turn to not loose precious items or totems' to rules
- Only one item and weapon per person... do this by labeling cards armor or weapon
- Add to rules that when you acquire, place three cards under the figurine
- Add to rules 'once a totem is claimed, it can't be claimed again unless a tribesman dies' to the rules, and cover under Death in the rules
- In rules it might be helpful to clarify what's in play versus what's in you hand
- Choose something to use for food tokens
- Optional Rule: Every moon cycle reduces food by each player

1. Eliminate Secondary Cards
2. Lighten Game Rules
3. Lighten Up Rules
4. EXTINCT → Lost (rules)
5. Sex Card Answer should point right way
6. Start w/ food Token?
7. All symbols to "6 Thys" to board/ and to card
8. Resume Gender Powers; Eliminate Gender Card Powers
9. Add Draw A Card to list of thys one can do
10. Examine Items (like hats) to eliminate Rev Ang
11. Clarity in Rules in different ^{color} / Hat / Blue
12. Add Trade Item / Totem / Cards or just cards, ^{just card}
13. Write Level on game board
14. Death ^{card} Cards in Play & in Hand
15. State Discard ^{month} Card f/food on turn ^{cash in & chase item & make so cash in}
16. When Die Draw the cards again, repeat starting turn
17. Eliminate ~~companion~~ / Companion 'Usable only by' possibly?
18. "Add trade cards f/keys" to rules"

"Fortify the Camp"

19. Moon Reduces Food * advanced optional rule?

20. ^{rule} OR Thus only one weapon & armor per person (add or Weapon / Armor to Item Card)
21. When You Acquire put 3 cards under figurine
22. Once a totem is claimed it can't be claimed again
23. In rules clarify (in play "reveal hand")
24. Food Tokens

PIECES

- 1 Game Board
- 1 Sex Die
- 6 Spirit Totems
- 6 Player Pieces
- 18 Gray Sex Cards
- 47 Yellow Fortify Cards
- 57 Blue Gather Cards
- 71 Red Hunt Cards
- Food Tokens

SETUP

Two to six can play. Divide the cards into the four different types of decks — Hunt, Gather, Fortify, and Sex — then shuffle each deck. Place the game board in the center of the table, place the Spirit Totems on the game board, and align the Hunt, Gather, Fortify, and Sex decks along the outside of the game board as shown.

The oldest player in real life always goes first. Do the following:

1. Roll the Birth Die to determine what the starting sex will be for your tribe member; this can't change unless otherwise noted by a card.
2. Choose a tribal member Player Piece.
3. Find the corresponding player card in the Sex Deck for your color/sex, and place it in front of you. Insert Pictures of card here.
4. Place your Player Piece into the Start Circle on the game board. Insert Picture.

When the first player finishes their turn, the player to their left takes a turn, and so on rolling the Birth Die, choosing a Player Piece, and finding their corresponding Player card. After each player has done this, deal two cards from the Hunt, Gather, and Fortify decks to each player.

TURN PHASES

Each player's turn begins as soon as the previous player's turn ends. First a player has to decide if the tribe is going to hunt, gather, or fortify by drawing one card face up from the corresponding deck. All decks yield Totem Cards, but only certain decks yield Monster, Disaster, and Item Cards.

- If the player decides that the tribe will gather, each player takes a 1 Food Token each
- If the player decides that the tribe will hunt, and it's a Monster Card (See Combat)
- If the card is a Disaster it applies to all members of the tribe immediately. (See Disaster)
- Any other card, reveal to the other tribe members, and place it into your hand.

Then, each turn a player has two free actions that they may take. A player may either:

- place or remove a card in play
- trade a card from your hand to another tribe member for a card in their hand
- acquire a Spirit Totem
- draw a card from any pile
- get rid of a Monster or Item Card and receive it's equivalent in Food
- or any combination of the previous. These options are also written on your player Sex Card.

At the end of each player's turn you can only have five cards in your hand, unless otherwise noted by a card in play. If you have more than five cards, discard down to five and give them to the lowest level person in your tribe. Once all Players complete their turns, a Phase of the Moon has gone by (see Phase of the Moon).

TRIBE ADVANCEMENT

Each player must work together to help every tribal member advance and survive. To achieve stability with and a quality of life for your tribe, each member of the tribe has to be born, identify with a gender, develop an attraction, form at least one relationship, achieve a place in the tribe, and acquire a Spirit Totem of their very own. This is done by players collaboratively building and supportively sharing cards, and overcoming disasters and monsters together.

To win the game of Propagayda, each tribe member must achieve the six conditions: being born, identifying with a gender, developing an attraction, forming at least one relationship, achieving a place in the tribe, and finding a Spirit Totem of their very own.

Most of these will be in the form of cards and will have to be drawn by the individual players; however, Spirit Totem, Companion, and Item cards can be traded from one player to another in exchange for other cards.

Each time a player places one of the following cards in play:

- Sex Card (given at Birth)
- Gender Card
- Attraction Card
- Companion Card
- Class Card

... or they acquire a Spirit Totem by discarding three Totem Cards at once, in exchange for a Spirit Totem figurine, they advance their Player Piece on the game board to next circle level of their tribe's development.

WINNING THE GAME

Once each tribe member is in the last circle of their tribe's development, and has a Sex, Gender, Attraction, Companion, and Class Card in play with a Spirit Totem in play, the game is over and the tribe has won!

COMBAT

Often when a player makes a decision for the tribe to hunt, they will encounter a Monster. When this occurs, the player that drew the card makes the decision (usually by consulting the rest of the tribe) to either fight the Monster or placate the Monster by doing the following:

FIGHTING

If the tribe is going to fight a Monster, each player:

- counts their level from the game board
- adds to that all bonuses from Companion Cards in play
- and adds to that all bonuses from Item Cards in play

Then add each player's total is added together with the other's player's total, and this determines the tribe's combined strength. If the tribe's combined strength is greater than the Monster's strength – or if it the tribe's combined strength is tied with the Monster's strength, and you have a Warrior in your tribe – the Monster is defeated. The tribe then gains the amount of food indicated on the Monster Card.

PLACATING

If the tribe is going to placate a Monster instead of fighting, the tribe must sacrifice the amount of food indicated on the Monster Card. The Monster then is discarded, and no harm or reward comes to the tribe.

DEATH

If the tribe can't fight or placate the Monster, then the player that drew the Monster Card dies. When a player experiences Death the Monster is put into the discard pile, their turn is immediately over, the player removes their Player Piece from the board, they return their Spirit Totem if applicable, and they discard all of their cards from their hand and in play to the appropriate discard piles.

On the player's next turn, they are born again and must start over by rolling the Birth Die, choosing a Player Piece, finding their corresponding Player card, placing their Player Piece into the Start Circle on the game board, and drawing two cards from each deck. Their turn is then over, and it goes to the next player. When it comes back to this player, and going forward, the player resumes normal play and turn actions.

ACQUIRING A SPIRIT TOTEM

When a player has three similar Totem Cards, they may use one of the free actions during their turn to acquire a Spirit Totem.

The player then stacks the three similar Totem Cards in play, retrieves the totem card from the game board and places it on top of the stacked Totem Cards. The player then moves their Player token up one level.

Once a totem has been claimed, it can't be reclaimed by another player, unless that player dies.

LOSING THE GAME

If at any time there are no Player Tokens on the board, the game is over and the tribe is lost.

CARDS

For cards in general, player's may find it beneficial to reveal their hands to other tribe members; however, make sure you are aware of the cards that are 'in play' versus 'in your hand'.

COMPANION CARDS

If players don't have an attraction, players may put Companion Cards into play until they develop one, then discard or keep the companion accordingly.

ITEM CARDS

Each tribe member may have no more than two Item Cards in play.

DISASTER CARDS

Disaster cards affect the entire tribe, and are put into play immediately when they are drawn at the beginning of the round or traded (except for the first round of gameplay). Some Disaster Cards have one affect and then go away, while others stay in play until resolved by the tribe.

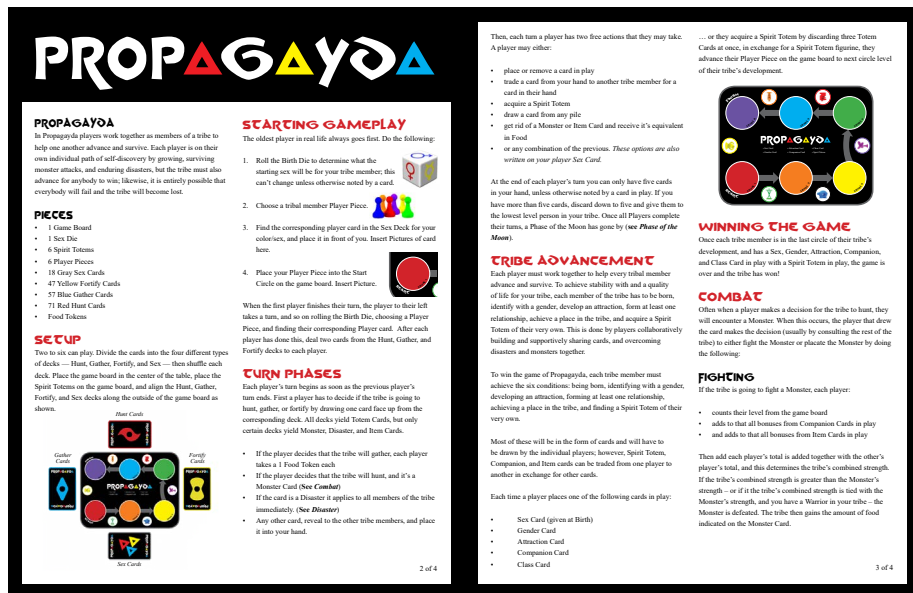

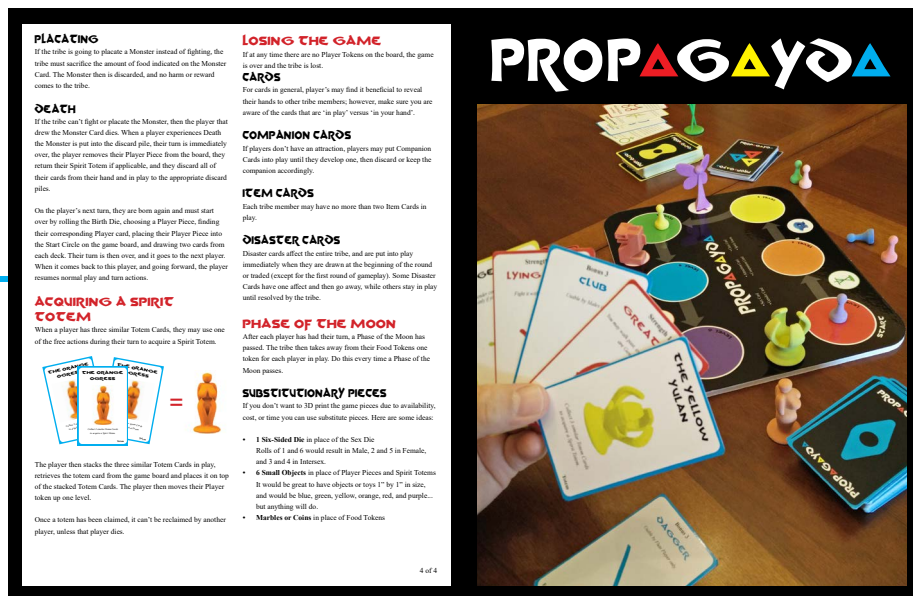

PHASE OF THE MOON

After each player has had their turn, a Phase of the Moon has passed. The tribe then takes away from their Food Tokens one token for each player in play. Do this every time a Phase of the Moon passes.

SUBSTITUTIONARY PIECES

If you don't want to 3D print the game pieces due to availability, cost, or time you can use substitute pieces. Here are some ideas:

- 1 Six-Sided Die in place of the Sex Die
Rolls of 1 and 6 would result in Male, 2 and 5 in Female, and 3 and 4 in Intersex.
- 6 Small Objects in place of Player Pieces and Spirit Totems
It would be great to have objects or toys 1" by 1" in size, and would be blue, green, yellow, orange, red, and purple... but anything will do.
- Marbles or Coins in place of Food Tokens

Assessment Materials

The pre-assessment and for the Propagayda board game is a way to determine what players know about the topic of LGBTQIA persons before they experience the game. You can download this in print format or simply submit it online through Wuforms.

Utilizing suggestions from BoardGameGeek, The Board Game Designers Guild, The Safe Zone Project, and TechSmith the following post-assessment questions about design, experience, functionality, and social awareness were administrated anonymously or by a moderator on paper after play/usability testing of Propagayda.

Also, these forms have been integrated into the <http://propagayda.com/> website.

The image shows two overlapping Wufoo assessment forms. The top form is titled 'Post-Assessment' and contains questions about game design and flow. The bottom form is titled 'Pre-Assessment Form' and contains questions about knowledge of LGBTQIA topics.

| 6 | I like the co-operative nature of the game. You can get to the end first and then switch roles to more of a support role. You could then farm and trade to help others get to the end. | 4:40pm - 2015-11-07 |
| 5 | The best feature of this game, based on it's assumed goal, is having to figure out the relationships between the player's sex, gender, and attraction cards. | 4:01pm - 2015-11-07 |

| 6 | Post impressions were that the game was professionally conducted and I didn't really know what to expect until I began playing. | 5 | Each individual person has their own unique combination of sex, attraction, and gender. Not none of these combination make a person any less more or less valuable to society than any other combination. | 4:01pm - 2015-11-07 |
| 4 | It definitely showed me all of the various and combinations of sex, attraction and gender. | 3:58pm - 2015-11-07 |

| # | Content | Date |
|-------|---|----------------------|

| 5 | Wanting to go through with the physical aspects of a relationship. | 1:13pm - 2015-11-07 |
| 4 | For me, attraction is what brings people together and is used to find a specific partner. Sex is creating a bond between people and normally acted upon from attraction. | 1:10pm - 2015-11-07 |
| 3 | You can be attracted to people through different types of relationships. You can be attracted to people who are like you, and you choose them to be your friends. Sex is different in the fact that you would not have sex with all of the people you are friends with. | 12:56pm - 2015-11-07 |

My first impressions of LGBTQ people were:

My impressions/understanding of LGBTQ people has changed or evolved throughout my life...

| # | Content | Date |
|-------|---|----------------------|
| 6 | When I was young, I was taught that LGBTQ individuals were sinners who needed to be fixed by ending their sexual desires. As I have grown older, I have come to realize that LGBTQ individuals are biologically drawn to be attracted to a subset of many genders and they are unable to drastically change their attractions. Every person's attraction is unique, no matter their sex, gender, or attraction. | 1:26pm - 2015-11-07 |
| 4 | Absolutely. I was raised in a small town with a very misinformed ignorant family structure that was very religious based. The preconceptions I had did not really change until I went away to college and got to experience the real world and expand my views beyond the small corner of the world I was in. I became friends with many LGBTQ people since then and began to think of my personal family as very close minded. | 1:10pm - 2015-11-07 |
| 3 | I have decided that I cannot understand about LGBTQ people, so my impressions/understanding hasn't really changed at that much. I have started to notice the change in people around me, though. Some for the better, but unfortunately some for the worse. | 12:56pm - 2015-11-07 |
| 2 | people are people, it shouldn't matter who they are attracted to | 12:52pm - 2015-11-07 |
